THE TEXT

- 1. Under a bridge in Shoreditch, Josh Coombes is kneeling on a busy footpath as he cuts the hair of a young man called Jason. As the pair chat away and cuttings drop to the floor, people file past and gaze at them with intrigue. Josh and Jason met just five minutes ago, around the corner outside a newsagent. Jason is homeless and lives on the streets of East London. For the last two years, Josh has been wandering around the city and offering free haircuts to people just like Jason.
- 2. "It all came from a state of feeling quite helpless about the situation of the homeless and how apparent it is in every city I visited," says 30- year- old Josh, who lives in South London and has been working as a hairdresser for five years. "I knew I couldn't solve it, so how else could I begin to help?"
- 3.He began carrying his hairdressing equipment in his rucksack rather than leaving it at the salon. On his days off, or when coming home from work, he would get talking to anyone he saw living on the street and offer them a free haircut. "Having access to the same amenities as us is not on their agenda. So trying to help them feel more dignified and confident is a big part of it."
- 4.At first, it might seem rather trivial to offer those in abject poverty a haircut. But then, as the interactions play out, you realise it isn't really about the haircut at all. In the time he spent with Jason, Josh was able to learn the story of how he ended up on the streets; they talked about his problems and plans, and even had a laugh. "When someone is literally cutting your hair, you have to drop your defences," says Josh.
- 5.For Jason, a sudden loss of housing was all that it took to send his life spiralling. What was supposed to be a stop gap on the streets has turned into 6 months. "It's easy to blame it on the person and hide the real reasons, but that is such a cop-out for society," says Josh.

yet / challenges / changing / for / last / globally / arise / just / in

The world is now more indifferent to tradition and past reputations of educational establishments. We live in a fast- changing world, and producing more of the same knowledge and skills will not suffice to address the challenges of the future. A generation ago, teachers could expect that what they taught would last their students a lifetime. Today, because of rapid economic and social change, schools have to prepare students for jobs that have not yet been created, technologies that have not yet been invented and problems that we do not yet know will arise.

Think back 50 years: could educators then have predicted how the Internet, which emerged globally in 1994, or the mobile phone, which appeared a few years later, would change the world? These technologies have not just become tools of learning, but networking and knowledge sharing, as well as innovation and entrepreneurship.

A video of a starving and thin polar bear collapsing in Canada's wilderness has gone viral on the Internet. The video shows the bear in search of food, (wander) wandering across land with no snow or ice. The creature is all skin and bones and is (see) seen foraging for food in rusty waste containers. It is at times too weak to support its own body weight and has difficulty standing. Paul Nicklen, the photographer who took the video footage, (state) stated the polar bear's plight was a clear sign of the devastating impact of climate change. He said filming the animal (be) was or had been heart-wrenching. MrNicklen who is part of the environmental group Sea Legacy, explained that his team members (push) were pushing through their tears and emotions while they were documenting this (die) dying polar bear. The bear they filmed was not old and probably died within hours. He said: "This is what starvation looks like. The muscles deteriorate. No energy. It's a slow, (pain) painful death."

Sony is set to release a robot dog designed to live in your house and control your electronics, a new report says. The (toy / puppet / device) could also learn new tricks and respond to your commands, like a real pet dog. It sounds a (much / few / lot) likea modernised version of AIBO, a robot dog Sony first started selling in 1999. Sony's new robot dog will go (at / in / on) sale in spring 2018, according to the Wall Street Journal, but will be unveiled at a launch event next month. According to people familiar with the company's plans, it will (have / be / need) internet-connected and feature new components designed to make its movements more lifelike and enable (it / him / them) to respond to people much faster than the old version. Its headline feature, (while / but / however), will be the ability to control smart appliances and other electronics around your home, such as washing machines, lights and thermostats.
